South Cove Manor at Quincy Point Hits the Road

South Cove Manor at Quincy Point, a non-profit rehabilitation and care community, welcomed a new arrival on Friday, March 8th - a 14 passenger van equipped with a wheelchair lift and emblazoned with South Cove Manor's signature crane. Despite Friday's chilly temperatures, the van was greeted with applause by smiling rehabilitation patients, residents, staff and Board members.

The purchase of the van was made possible through the generosity of an anonymous donor and will provide greater access for residents to engage in community life. Reflecting on the opportunities the van will provide for all patients and residents, CEO Bill Graves remarked, "Having the ability to stay connected to the community is so important to all human beings – the fact that someone needs to reside at a nursing and rehabilitation center shouldn't restrict their opportunities to engage in their community." Graves continued, stating that "the addition of a wheelchair accessible van at South Cove Manor will have a tremendous impact on our residents' quality of life."

South Cove Manor also plans to use the van to provide transportation for local seniors to attend educational programs offered at South Cove Manor at Quincy Point, part of the organization's outreach efforts to serve the community.

South Cove Manor at Quincy Point is a 5 Star rated, non-profit rehabilitation and care community with over three decades of experience providing leading edge care to older adults. From their original home in Boston to their current state-of-the-art, multicultural community at 288 Washington Street in Quincy, South Cove Manor has built a legacy of excellence rooted in honoring elders and their traditions.
